Gay Community Fears Bashing Trend

Editor's Note: Some of the students' names have been changed at their request.

By KATHY STOLTZFUS

"It has occurred to me that someday I could possibly die. As dumb as it seems, die because I happen to love someone," said Marty, a member of UNO's Gay and Lesbian Student Organization.

Marty, along with many members of the Omaha gay and lesbian community, feel the level of violence directed against them in the downtown area has become intolerable.

The Aug. 13 robbery and murder of Gregory Kowal, a 39-year-old Union Pacific employee who was last seen leaving Gilligan's, a gay bar on Leavenworth Street, has been called "merely the latest violent crime to be reported by gays and lesbians frequenting businesses along Leavenworth Street," by The Times of the Heartland, a local gay and lesbian publication.

"It is against gays and lesbians," said Jay Jankovich, editor of the Times. "What's happening is they're being targeted as vulnerable subjects leaving the bars. They're alone, they've been drinking, so they're more susceptible to crime. The area has been targeted because gay bars and gay life are downtown."

Jankovich, who knew Kowal, said he believed Kowal was the victim of a gay bashing.

"He wasn't much of a drinker, he was a very quiet guy and he didn't pick people up for one night stands," Jankovich said.

Marty said it has reached the point where she no longer goes out at night alone. "I don't go downtown at night unless I'm with a lot of friends. It's extremely dangerous and I don't know anyone who hasn't been at least verbally abused," she said.

William Muldoon of the Omaha Police Department said Friday that police have not yet established a motive in the Kowal case.

"We don't know whether they were out looking for a gay or whether it was a robbery or a carjacking. As far as we know, it can even be someone he met at the bar who turned on him and attacked him once he got outside the bar. That certainly wouldn't be a gay bashing, that's a robbery," Muldoon said.

Of the perceived violence in the area, Muldoon said that "to call it all gay bashing, to say there's

Senate Approves Fountain Project

By JULIE LARSEN

The Student Senate approved a resolution for a $40,000 fountain project at its first meeting of the fall semester last Thursday.

Fountains will be located on the east and west ends of the mall area in front of the Student Center, said Senator Heidi Hess, one of the members of the budget committee which presented the resolution.

The project, scheduled to coincide with Student Center renovations next year, will be funded by an allocation from a student government reserve account, which is an accumulation of a percentage of student fees. Student government is required to use money in the reserve account for campus improvements that can benefit all students.

Sen. Matt Schulz, also a member of the budget committee, said that all labor and architectural fees for the fountains' construction would be donated. All future maintenance and repairs on the fountains would be paid by UNO.

"An opportunity like this doesn't come along often," Schulz said. "We're getting a $100,000 fountain for $40,000."

"This is something that can affect all of the students who are here, or who will be here next year and all of the students who will be here for years and years to come," Schulz said.

Improving campus image was a main concern voiced by a few senators.

"Making people want to hang around our Student Center and be a part of it and want to stay here at UNO has been a problem for a long time," Sen. Michael Kennedy said. "I believe that this (fountain) is a good idea."

Sen. Susan Greenslate said that she had been attending the university off and on since 1966, and the campus had never been a place where people wanted to hang around.

Sen. Gary Harper objected to the fountain because students weren't made aware of the project and he felt it should be presented in a referendum for student vote.

Student President/Regent Jennifer Newhouse said that though she appreciated the hard work and cooperation by the budget committee and senators, she thought that the senate should review its goals.

Newhouse said she approached students asking what they would want done with the money in the reserve account.

According to Newhouse, students came up with these suggestions:

- A shuttle between Lincoln and Omaha, a thirteen passenger van which would include upkeep and a driver for one year.

- A van used by the handicapped students who currently utilize the program called MOBY.

MOBY service does not run at night therefore handicapped students cannot take night classes. Expansion of the infant child care center, including service to half of the people on the waiting list.

"If this is what you want to do with $40,000, if you don't think that any of the suggestions that I brought up, or any of these goals that you yourselves came up with, are germane enough or important enough to implement before a fountain,

UNO Ombudsmen Are Here to Help

By MARYLYNNE ZIEMBA

He walks, pacing the room back and forth, only stopping to stare blankly at the wall and wipe his sweaty hands on the side of his jeans. Knowing that his dilemma is not an easy one to solve, he sighs deeply and continues to pace the room, wondering who can help.

Situations like these can be avoided through the help of the Ombudsmen, three UNO faculty members who provide assistance and problem mediation services for students and faculty.

"We are available to the students, faculty and staff if they have a concern about anything dealing with the university," Ombudsman Joe Kaminski said. "Everything from grades to being enrolled in a class or dealing with supervisors.

"We deal with any kind of concern they might have—if they can't resolve the problem or if they're in need of information to solve a problem."

The Ombudsmen consist of Kaminski, associate coordinator for Campus Recreation, Marti Rosen-Atherton, Counseling and University Division, and Richard Stacy, associate professor of health education and coordinator of health education programs.

The positions of Ombudsmen were created by UNO President Kirk E. Naylor around the fall of 1970. Each year, Chancellor Del Weber announces that applications will be taken for the positions.

The term of an Ombudsman is one year, which may be renewed.

"We are asked to intervene when people have problems," Stacy said. "Often, we open the lines of communication that may have closed. In addition, we give and seek information for people and interpret rules for people. We can also help people determine if they have been treated unfairly by the university."

"We can help with student complaints, grades, employee-employer issues, difficulties with instructors or offices on campus, financial aid, or anything," Rosen-Atherton said.

Handling disputes through an Ombudsman "saves time and anger in the long run," Stacy said.

Ombudsmen meet with students and faculty on an appointment-only basis and any meeting with an Ombudsman is held in complete confidence.

According to Rosen-Atherton, an Ombudsman has no authority to impose any action on either party. However, they can give suggestions and make a recommendation in mediation.

Ombudsman can also help them cut through the red tape that can prolong finding a solution.

"I do a lot of listening," Stacy said. "Often the advice I give is based on information I might have that they might not. I have always prided myself in being a good listener.

"I have been helped in the past by Ombudsmen and I guess I have somewhat of a personal goal to make sure that people are treated fairly."

It is not only the student who learns during the process, but the Ombudsman may learn more about UNO.

"My motivating factor in becoming an Ombudsman was to help the university committee and in turn, learn more about the working of the university, to be more familiar with how the departments operate and gain a better understanding of how the university operates—to help and learn in the process," Kaminski said.

One of the best ways to avoid problems is to be informed and know the procedures and policies of UNO.

"Ask a lot of questions. Don't be afraid because there are some policy guidelines people aren't familiar with. Read the information given to you. If you still need help, call one of the Ombudsmen," Kaminski said.

"People within the university know they have a voice and they will be listened to wherever they are. We're here to help you. However, we can't help if you don't come to us," Rosen-Atherton said.

To make an appointment with any of the three Ombudsmen, call the office of Kaminski, 554-3222, Rosen-Atherton, 554-2670, and Stacy, 554-2409.

Internet Offers Information

By JOEL EVELETH

Your research paper is due in two days and you've exhausted all local sources for information. What do you do? Where can you turn?

Try accessing Internet through the UNO computer labs, a virtual transportation center of information from around the world.

For the past two years, Assistant Director of Academic Computing Lloyd Hasche and a team of students have arranged access to Internet, a network with the capability of interconnecting computers in over 130 countries.

Internet allows a user to tap into a wealth of information ranging from world-wide weather to the Dead Sea Scrolls. The Library of Congress, NASA Headline News, National Science Foundation are a few of the multitude of topics available. With over 12-15 million users on the Internet highway, the range of uses are unlimited.

The network currently has over 6,400 accounts on the UNO campus and the number is growing. Teachers are using the network to post student course assignments, campus organizations are using it to broadcast events and students are using it to share opinions with international pen pals.

According to Hasche, the system is very user friendly and nothing to be intimidated by.

"The best possible way to learn (the system) is to jump in and explore," he said. "With help commands on every screen, it's almost impossible to get lost."

So how can you get involved in this wave of technology? Just head down to the computer lab, and with a student ID, you can get your own account, complete with an access name, password and E-mail address for free.

Hasche advises everyone to "get an account and give it a try."

Enrollment Is Up

Summer 1993 enrollment figures rose slightly from the summer 1992 session, according to figures released by the UNO Registrar's Office.

Total enrollment for the '93 summer sessions was 7,977 students, up six from last year's 7,971. Figures were not available for individual sessions and courses.

Pope's Visit Strikes Nerve

In a recent interview from his penthouse suite high above the bustling city of Denver, Pope John Paul II declared that he may very well be, more popular than the Beatles.

In his own left-handed way, the pope struck a nerve in all of us. For I, much like many of my friends, have often dreamed of being the lead singer in some wildly popular rock band.

Now, I can only dream of becoming the pope.

Two weeks ago, over 500,000 people descended on the mile high city for a shot at kissing the ring or at least fainting trying to kiss it (fainting is an automatic 10 years off purgatory). As I watched the crowd on the television, one question kept running through my head: WHO IS THIS GUY?

He doesn't have the looks, or the voice; he doesn't have the body, and he certainly doesn't have the hair; he's not the lead singer. But he is the pope, and for many, just being the pope is enough.

The next question I found myself asking was: isn't the pope just some ordinary guy before everybody decided to make him the pope?

If someone suddenly made my Uncle Bob the pope, would half a million people be trying to kiss Uncle Bob's diamond studded horseshoe ring? The one he got in Vegas?

The answer is yes. Everybody needs somebody, anybody, that they can point to for a little salvation. But I'm willing to bet, that the pope eats, sleeps, cries, and yes, will eventually die like we all will. So what's with the pope worship? I only ask because I fear for your very souls.

Fortunately, I got out from under the heavy shroud of Catholicism years ago, but I will tell you this, worshipping anyone besides the Big Man is strictly forbidden. That means no kissing of rings, no bowing down in homage, and absolutely, positively, no wearing of T-shirts that say, "I GOT A MILE HIGH WITH THE POPE."

Do not despair though, if you're worried about the sins you've committed, worry no longer. The world is silly, that's all, just SILLY.

At the beginning of August, when the people of Iowa were suffering through the floods, they were supposed to receive a large shipment of portable restrooms. They didn't. Know why? Those restrooms had to be shipped to Denver for the pope's laser light show.

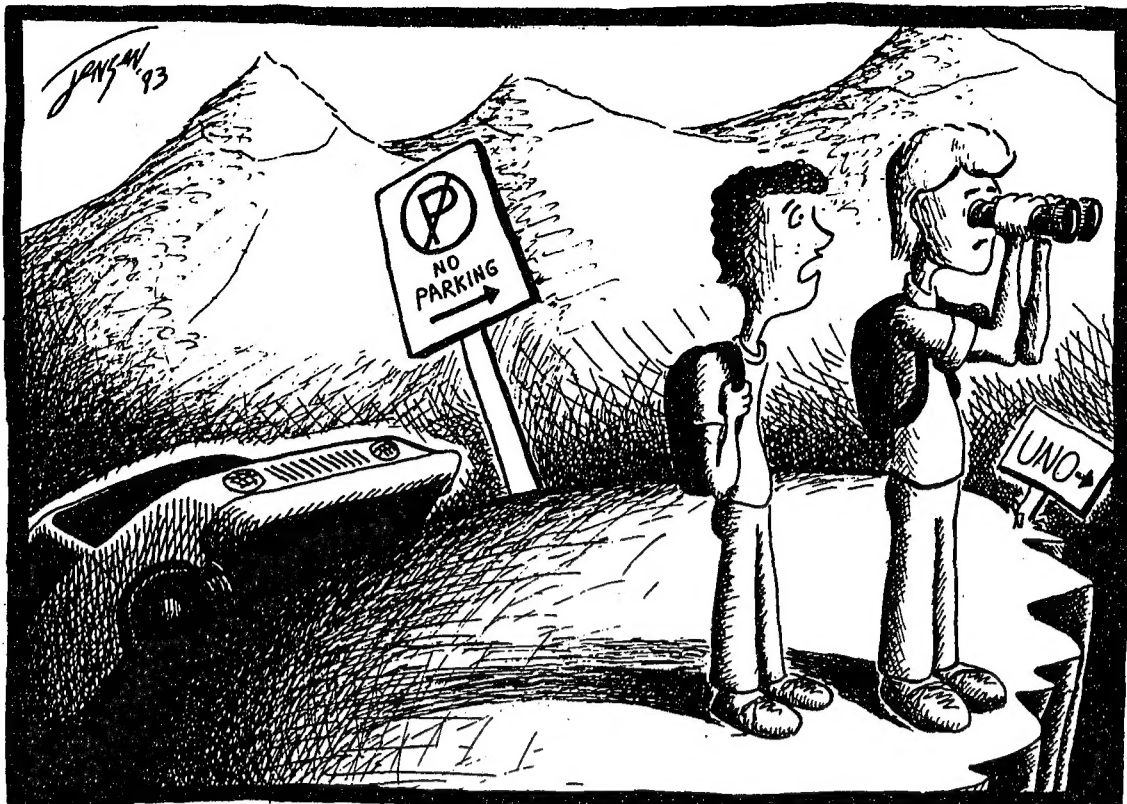

How can you have a show without port-a-potties? Silly, I say, just SILLY.

What was this large gathering of pope scopers all about, anyway? What did they all talk about, sitting on their sleeping bags in Denver's gymnasiums, classrooms, and parks?

Did they talk about not using a condom, or rehabilitating their gay friends, or not coveting their neighbor's goods? Were they secure in the idea that an omniscient being would even give a crap about their tedious little indiscretions?

I suggest putting down the acoustic guitars and forgetting the lyrics to Kumbaya; taking off the foam rubber head gear resembling the pope's miter; running like hell from any event entitled "A Jamboree For Youngsters."

The world presents a world of possibilities, so pick your own, not somebody else's. Forget about old men in funny hats. And if you absolutely, positively, feel the urge to kiss the ring, you can stop by the Gateway offices ... I'm usually pretty accessible.

EXACTLY HOW FAR AWAY DID WE PARK?

Homosexuals Deserve Civil Rights

Hate Takes Away Personal Freedom

The social stigma attached to homosexuality and bisexuality is, like all prejudices, a kind of hate that is contemptible and repulses me to the depths.

Psychologist and philosopher Abraham Maslow states in his hierarchy of needs that sex is essential to mankind's survival. He says that beyond reproduction, sex is an appropriate form of affection, communication, and stress relief. However, he said nothing about sexuality.

To deny the choice of companions to anyone on the basis of sex, color or religious belief is immoral. It rips at the delicate threads of Maslow's hierarchy and the human needs for intimate companionship.

I hate to bring religion into the discussion, but doesn't prejudice of any sort contradict the Bible's message of love and acceptance? This same book condemns hate, genocide and adultery, yet it has been quoted time and time again by the likes of David Duke, Benito Mussolini, George Wallace, former governor of Alabama and even Ross Perot.

They have taken this book and twisted its words around and have used them against those who do not oppose integration, miscegenation, and the so-called "gay lifestyle."

Homosexuality is not a lifestyle choice, it is an intricate and innate part of a person.

Popular beliefs that homosexuals are more promiscuous are unfounded and absurd. People also tend to believe that AIDS is a gay disease and their just punishment for their "sexual deviancy."

Those individuals need to take long and hard look at the world in which they have placed. The fastest growing percentage of diagnosed AIDS and HIV cases in this country are teen-age heterosexual girls.

Gays were sought out in the beginning of the AIDS crisis as scapegoats. They were, and still are being, treated much the same as the Jews in Hitler's diseased Germany.

A person cannot control with whom they fall in love. Nor can they control to whom they are attracted.

Laws denying protection by state agencies, such as the laws passed in Colorado, are as much of an abomination in the eyes of liberty and any type of higher power that may exist. This is even more of an abomination than any homosexual could ever be.

Gays and lesbians deserve the type of protection afforded to all those who step on the soil of the United States. The Constitution has been amended 26 times to better accommodate this nation and its changing needs. To give rights to only certain people is frighteningly ridiculous. It is nearly as ridiculous as repealing the 13th, 14th, 15th, and 19th Amendments.

I believe that hiding freedom behind the legs of conservatives and Bible-beating psychos will be the downfall of a nation built on the validity of independence and liberty.

"Civil rights now!" was a common chant throughout the 60s and was only heard after several years of violence. This chant, however, has not been fully realized. There are still Americans who, through no fault of their own, are being hidden as members of our society. They, too, are being slain by moronic bigots.

In the 60s, a young boy named Emmett Till was visiting an uncle in Mississippi. Emmett was 11-years-old and wanted to leave Chicago for the summer. Chicago was far more integrated than the small backwoods town where Till and a cousin would be staying.

While buying candy in a general store, he looked a white woman in the eyes while saying thank you. Hours later, Emmett taken from his uncle's rickety shack. That was the last time he was seen alive. Emmett was found in a tributary of the Mississippi River with two bullets in his skull, every bone his body, aside from one in his leg, broken. A child whose only crime was one which he could not control.

Emmett was born with brown skin.

I hope you found the preceding tale sickening. I hope that it brought to life how disgusting racism and prejudice are. Now imagine that happening today to a gay man. His life stolen because of something that he was born with.

We are all guaranteed the right to safety, protection by law, and the chance to be happy. But, if two women can't have these things together; can anyone even have them at all?

If you are gay or lesbian; be proud of who you are. If you are not gay, yet value your civil rights, be supportive and accepting of those who are. Be intolerant of those who have decided to appoint themselves proverbial judge, jury and executioner.

Gay rights are civil rights.

people picking on gays and lesbians alone and are going down there with that intent, well, I'm not quite sure that's the whole story."

Muldoon stated that the facts show that most of the reported crimes in the area have been spontaneous acts of violence.

"If someone comes and robs you, it may have nothing to do with your status," he said.

"It may be true that these are random acts of violence, but I would really like to see the statistics," said a UNO lesbian student who did not wish to be identified.

"There are hate crimes going on. They happen and they happen a lot," she said.

Jankovich said he has been dissatisfied with the overall response of the Omaha Police Department to the concerns of the gay and lesbian community. Police protection has improved since the Kowal murder has attracted increased media attention on the area, Jankovich said, but "before that, the police were very, very reluctant."

"I'm almost sure that after a while, it's just going to die back down."

Muldoon said Omaha police are not insensitive to the feelings of gays and lesbians.

"What's real down there (downtown) that there is a perception that it's unsafe," Muldoon said. "So regardless of what the numbers bear out on actual incidents, it's a real issue."

Muldoon said the actual magnitude of the problem is hard to define because crimes against gays and lesbians may go unreported.

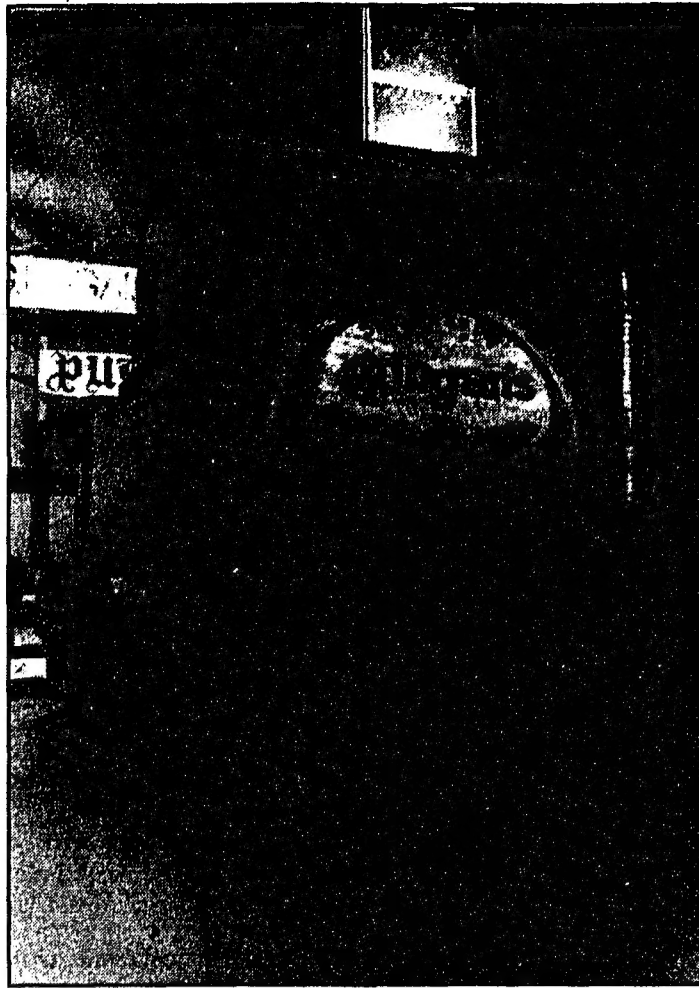

"When someone is assaulted, they may not want to be identified as being in this area," he said. "So for whatever reason, they're reluctant to report it to the police."

Jankovich said he would like to see more security in gay bars and establishments.

"Look at Crossroads Mall," he said. "They have security. You look at any other type of business, for the most part, and they have security whether they have a problem or are trying to prevent one."

Muldoon had this advice for anyone concerned about their nighttime safety: "Be aware of your surroundings and your proximity to other people. That includes maintaining your composure and your person as far as not going out and getting totally intoxicated."

"If you're driving around downtown or anywhere, keep your doors locked and your windows raised, especially as you approach traffic lights or stop signs so somebody doesn't jump in your car. Once they're inside, you're in a bad way."

Gregory Kowal was last seen alive at Gilligan's, a bar at 1823 Leavenworth St. Some believe Kowal was a victim of gay bashing.

which will add an aura to this campus, I'm asking you to add an aura to students, add something to them which they can utilize everyday," Newhouse said.

In other business:

- The number of senators dwindled to just 16 occupied seats during the first fall semester meeting.

- Sen. Denise Henning of the College of Public Administration and Community Service was removed for excessive absences.

- Sens. Ted Theisen of the doinkers class and Kevin Nelson of the dinkers class, resigned their seats.

- Engineering Sen. S.D. Srb resigned his College of Fine Arts seat to fill the position of recording secretary.

- Sen. Dan Dahlem, Melissa Faltin and Cheryl Nicolas were appointed to rules committee. Sen. Dahlem was also appointed to sergeant-at-arms.

- Constitutions for two student organizations, the Free Thinking Society and the Order of Omega, were approved.

The school year got off to a flying start Sunday for UNO's Aviation Institute.

An estimated 400 people drove or flew to Eagle Airfield, north of Omaha, to attend the Back-to-School Fly/Drive-In sponsored by the Institute's Aeronautical Association.

"The purpose was to promote aviation and to recruit new members for the Aeronautical Association. We weren't expecting this many people," said Michaela Flynn, vice president of the club.

Different types of aircraft were on display with pilots offering rides and aerial exhibitions. Gliders, helicopters, ultra-light models, home-made experimental crafts, and a World War II training plane were some of the aircraft featured.

The Aeronautical Association, a student club which promotes aviation issues, is in its second year, said Flynn, an aviation studies major.

The club, which already has 35 members, sponsors guest speakers and participates in various flying trips, she said. Last year, the club attended the Oshkosh, Wis., "fly-in," the largest of its kind in the world.

Flynn said she hopes to receive her pilot's license by October.

"I just soloed for the first time a month ago. I've been interested in flying since I saw the Space Shuttle in the first grade," she said. "People get addicted to flying."

Rob Markise, president of the association, said aviation offers countless career opportunities.

"There's accountants and management positions, and teachers. It's not just piloting," said Markise, an aviation administration major. "Two people can fly a 747 plane, but it takes 250,000 people to get it off the ground. That includes architects, engineers, those working with noise pollution. Besides, it's doing something you love."

Among those attending Sunday's event was Harlon Hain, one of two local pilots who flew in a race around the world last year.

"There were 12 countries involved and of the 28 planes that started, 25 finished," Hain said, adding that his plane, a Cessna 310, finished third.

Hain said it took him and his companion 23 days to complete the trip, which started in Geneva, Switzerland and featured routes over Russia, Alaska, Canada, Greenland and Ireland. The race concluded in Cannes, France.

Flying over thousands of miles of open water from Greenland to Ireland was "no different" from any other part of the trip, Hain said. The trip over Siberia was probably the most nervous part.

"There's nothing there. It's a no-man's land," he said.

Hain said he hopes to fly in another world-wide race in May.

"I started flying in 1951 and I really enjoy it," he said.

To make it in today's job market ...

You've got to be a tiger

For many upcoming graduates, the idea of entering the job market sounds pretty scary. A lot of seniors are deterred by the high unemployment rate and the constant reminder that "it's a jungle out there" in the real world. Many underclassmen are concerned, too, as they wonder if the degrees they're working on will ever lead to employment.

UNO's Career Planning and Placement Services would like to help students through that jungle with the 1993 Career Exploration and Employment Fair on Sept. 16 at the Fieldhouse.

You'll have the opportunity to meet with representatives from local, national and international companies who will discuss full and part-time employment, internship possibilities and more.

Bring your questions for the future to "Career Fair '93: It's a Jungle Out There."

Hotline Targets Hazing

BY COLLEGE PRESS SERVICES

Ron Binder is about the last person a party-hearty University of Georgia fraternity brother wants to see standing on the front steps of the fraternity house at three in the morning.

Nightmare City.

For bleary-eyed fraternity men, the appearance of the hastily-dressed Binder can only mean one thing: Somebody called the Hazing Hotline.

Binder, the university's adviser to fraternities, has to be one of the most respected, yet most feared, officials among the 2,000 fraternity brothers on campus.

An anonymous phone call to his 24-hour hotline, which played a key role in cracking two major hazing incidents this past spring, can make or break a fraternity.

Sigma Phi Epsilon received a five-year suspension from the campus when an underage pledge almost died from guzzling nearly a fifth of whiskey. Kappa Alpha Psi was also suspended after an investigator from its national headquarters discovered that a pledge needed surgery from severely inflamed buttocks resulting from a paddling incident.

The hotline, which is nothing more than a phoneline to Binder at his Greek Life office and to his home in the evenings, has caught the attention of other university officials throughout the country who want to use it as a model.

"I know Auburn has one, and Florida State and Indiana University are seriously thinking about it," Binder said.

Binder doesn't mind being roused from a sound sleep by worried brothers, parents and girlfriends, he said. His wife is not thrilled about the phone calls, he says, but for him, it's all part of the job. If he can interrupt a hazing incident, or any other kind of misconduct, he doesn't mind the lack of sleep.

The success of the Hazing Hotline — he's received as many as 10 calls in one pledge period — is because Binder promises anonymity to callers, he said. He investigates as many as six incidents a month.

"We tell them we don't need names. We ask 'what is the behavior?' and give us the chapter name." We try to make it as easy as possible," Binder said, noting that unless information is corroborated, it can be a struggle for the university to take measures to intervene.

"I really got the idea from my mother," Binder said. "She had a friend whose son was joining a fraternity elsewhere in the country, and he called my mom about some things he was worried about. She advised him to call the dean's office at his school. But they told him he had to identify himself."

Binder said that very few of the hotline calls are bogus; however, some callers don't take the time to stay on the phone and give him enough information to follow up with the fraternity.

The calls that Binder receives usually come in after an incident. However, Binder has received calls about incidents about to happen, and that's when he makes an appearance at the fraternity house.

"We try to make certain the complaint is credible. Then we document the phone call before we say anything to the fraternity," he said.

Mark Scobee, president of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, called Binder's hotline a "double-edged sword," and though most fraternity men on the campus support it, it can leave fraternities vulnerable to false charges.

"It has really helped to stop hazing at the university, but you can get phony calls," Scobee said.

Scobee said fraternity presidents at the university are strongly opposed to hazing, and "it has been heading that way for a while."

The Hazing Hotline telephone number is widely published throughout the university. It is sent to residential assistants, faculty and is even distributed to residential homes within a block of a University of Georgia fraternity house.

UNO Foe Tops National Div. II Poll

BY TIM ROHWER

North Dakota State University, a North Central Conference (NCC) rival of UNO, was selected as the No. 1 team in the nation in the pre-season Division II football poll.

The poll was released last Wednesday.

The Bison were picked ahead of North Alabama University and Pittsburg State College of Kansas, last year's national runner-up.

Two other NCC teams, the University of North Dakota (UND) and Mankato State University (MSU) were also in the Top 20 list. UND was picked 10th, while MSU was picked in the 17th spot.

As expected, the Bison are the overwhelming choice to win the NCC, according to two polls released last Thursday.

North Dakota State received 38 of the 40 first-place votes of sportscasters and writers, and eight of nine first-place votes among NCC coaches.

UND and Augustana College each received one first-place vote by the media, while South Dakota State University received one first-place vote in the coaches' poll.

UNO was selected ninth in both polls, ahead of Morningside College, though the Mavericks did receive one vote for fourth place in the media poll.

The Bison have won the NCC the last three years and 11 NCC titles in the past 14 years. They lost to Pittsburg State, 38-37, in last year's Division II quarterfinal playoffs.

Jacksonville State University of Ala., which won last year's Division II title, has moved to Division I-AA.

The Bison return most of its players from last year's 10-2 team, including quarterback Arden Beachy, guard Kevin Bloom and wide receiver T.R. McDonald.

They will also play in a new indoor stadium which seats about 19,000.

Mike Patterson, Omaha World-Herald sportswriter who voted in the media poll, said in a press release, "The Bison christen their new dome with yet another NCC title. Augustana and Northern Colorado University could make it interesting, while UNO might surprise some folks if it can avoid key injuries."

UNO coach Tom Mueller said he was not surprised with the Bison's selection.

"They're awfully good and nationally respected. I think they've been ranked more times at No. 1, than not," Mueller said.

UNO will open its conference season on Sept. 18 when it travels to Fargo, N.D., to play the Bison.

Picking the conference order of finish is difficult for coaches, Mueller said.

"It's hard to tell at this time of the year. You may know the key players on the other teams, but you really don't know that much about the overall team, especially the depth. I remember last year, Augustana was picked to finish eighth or ninth, and they ended up 8-3. It's just hard to say," he said.

Students can still sign up for intramural outdoor sports in the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Building.

Intramurals Get Started

BY TIM ROHWER

Students still have until Wednesday to sign up for a variety of outdoor sports in UNO's intramural program.

They can participate in sand volleyball, flag football, tennis and golf leagues. A sand volleyball league for faculty and staff is also being formed.

For football and volleyball, a participant can sign up an entire team or individually to be put on a team when the leagues are formed.

The fee is $20 for the football and volleyball teams and $10 for each golf and tennis participant.

"Unless there is a forfeit, everyone will get their money back at the end of the year, so it's basically free," said Chris Doty, a student volunteer in the intramural sign-up.

Doty added at least seven players are required to form a football team and four to form a volleyball team, though more players are preferred to be more competitive with other teams.

The football and volleyball leagues will be divided into three divisions - mens, womens and mixed.

There will be mens and womens divisions in tennis and golf.

Doty said intramurals provide quality competition.

"Last year when I first joined a flag football team, I thought the action would be casual, but it's more competitive than you think," he said. "Everybody on my team, except one, played high school football and one played at Wayne State College before transferring to UNO. But since flag football is not a real physical sport, you don't have to be a big person to play."

Intramurals also offer social benefits, Doty added.

"You meet other people in intramurals. Last year, I already knew a couple of players on my team, but then I met the others and one time we went to a party and I met people from other teams. There are a lot of benefits," he said.

Registration for basketball, indoor soccer, racquetball and indoor volleyball will start on Oct. 7.

For more information, call 554-3257 or go to the intramural office in Room 100 in the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Building.

"Anybody can join intramurals. It's not just for fraternities," Doty said.

Lady Mavs Fall To Alumnae

FROM STAFF FILES

The UNO alumnae volleyball team rallied from a 13-6 deficit in the first game for a 16-14 win and went on to defeat the Lady Mav varsity, two games to one in an exhibition Friday night in the Fieldhouse.

It was the seventh straight win by the alumnae against the varsity in exhibition matches.

The alumnae won Friday's event with a 15-10 win in the third game after the varsity tied the match with a 15-10 win in the second game.

Omaha senior Laura Kelly had 10 kills and 15 digs in the match, while Laura Monahan, a senior from Lisle, Ill., finished with 18 digs and seven kills.

Amy Steffel, a freshman from Maplewood, Minn., led the varsity in assists with 32.

The Lady Mavs open their regular season Friday and Saturday by hosting the eight-team UNO Tournament in the Fieldhouse.

Among the participants will be the University of Nebraska at Kearney and crosstown rival, the College of St. Mary's.

'Seminoles Will Come Out on Top of NCAA Field'

For those of you who scan every newspaper in the Northern Hemisphere to get everybody and their brothers' opinion on the outcome of the upcoming gridiron season, here's one for you.

Being the rookie sport columnist this fall, I will struggle through the year in the shadow of Michael Messerly, our senior sports columnist.

But enough with the formalities. After all, the preseason is over. It's time to either put up or shut up for teams as well as columnists.

Division I Football

Many fear of going out on a limb when predicting a national champion. These fears have been put almost completely to rest this year, courtesy of the Florida State University Seminoles.

Considering the success of both the Florida State and University of Miami programs, you may wonder if it's something in the water down there.

Of all the published preseason polls, Florida State is ranked in the top five of every poll.

The Seminole offense is loaded for bear with Charlie Ward back under center, and Sean Jackson and William Floyd in the backfield. Atlantic Coast Conference Rookie of the Year Tamarick Vanover anchors a talented receiver unit.

Now, the Huskers come into play. If Nebraska leaves Boulder on Oct. 30 with another game in the win column, the Huskers are heading south. Of course, Colorado Coach Bill McCartney might have something to say about it.

Last season's final polls had Alabama No.

1 and the Seminoles No. 2. Look for those two numbers to be reversed this time around.

As for the Huskers' quest for all the roses (or oranges), two obstacles exist. The first is a non-conference clash with UCLA and the other Colorado.

Kevin Potter

Columnist

Division II Football

A quick glance at Street & Smith's Top 25 reveals four things that could spell trouble for the Mavericks.

Three of UNO's North Central Conference (NCC) foes are listed — North Dakota State at No. 3, Northern Colorado at No. 13, Mankato State at No. 20 and North Dakota at No. 23.

Just a two-point conversion away from the Division II championship game last season, the Bisons are far and away the pick in the NCC.

Those teams make up nearly half of the Mavericks' conference schedule, however.

If the Mavs can avoid the troublesome injuries that plagued them most of last season, they could flirt with a .500 record this season.

NFL Football

It is my firm belief if Emmitt Smith does not find his way into a Dallas Cowboys' uniform this season, they will be a longshot to make it to the Super Bowl.

If there is no Emmitt, then I'll have to go with the San Francisco 49ers in the NFC.

The AFC is a little tougher to pick but my nod has to go to the San Diego Chargers. Although my heart goes with Miami, my head says San Diego.

Well, here I am out of the proverbial limb now. Maybe I'm just a bit paranoid but was that a slight cracking sound?
